Our program today featured a panel of genealogists who have years of academic-level research experience who will address the subject of breaking through genealogical "brick walls." They will talk about how they have solved some of their own problems, and then take questions from members of the audience about the problems they each may be having in this area with suggestions of tools they may use to solve them. The four members of the panel were Ken Abel, Anita Fisk, John Gelber, and Mark Hester.

Respectfully Submitted,

Norma Schellberg, Secretary
